Roadside Geology of Wisconsin by Robert H. Dott, Jr. and John Attig

Robert H. Dott, Jr., emeritus professor of geology at UW-Madison, and John W. Attig, professor at the Wisconsin Geological and Natural History Survey, have a long history of leading field trips around the state. They have written a guidebook in which they recount the geologic evolution of places that people can see from their cars or can access readily from state highways. The 346-page book is heavily illustrated with more than 200 maps, figures, and photographs.
